Cause Of Air Tragedy Near Trammel Not Yet Determined

ARMY AIRMEN KILLED

Accident Comes Shortly After Pilot's Report Of "All Well"

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., July 29 — Twenty persons were killed when a huge American air lines transport plane crashed in flames at Trammel, Ky., near Bowling Green, during unfavorable weather, authorities reported today.

A number of air force officers from Wright field, Dayton, O., were among the victims.

Only two persons, both badly burned, survived the disaster.

They were Lt. Glenn Fellows of the U. S. Army Air Forces at Dallas, Tex., and S. K. Kaufman, an official of the Aviation Corporation of America.

They saved themselves as the flames roared through the plane by leaping from a window.

Lt. Fellows, his clothes aflame, jerked a window from its fastenings and allowed Kaufman to leap first. Kaufman, also painfully burned, broke a leg when he jumped and lay helpless for several hours while Fellows sought help.

The two were brought to the Bowling Green city hospital for treatment.

W. H. Lyle, a night policeman at the hospital, said Fellows' face was seared by the flames, that much of his hair had been burned off and that flesh was burned from his hands.

He quoted the lieutenant as saying his hands had been thus seriously burned as he tore frantically at his blazing uniform.

Both To Recover

Lyle said physicians expected both men to recover.

Lt. Fellows said at the hospital that there had been little thought of danger although he realized that unfavorable weather prevailed. The plane for some time, however, had ridden above this only suddenly to plunge into its midst.

One motor dead, he said, and the pilot, Capt. H. A. Stiller, evidently was seeking a landing place in the hilly, sparsely settled country, when the plane crashed, hit a stump and immediately burst into flames.

The wreckage was scattered about a radius of 200 yards and most or all of those killed never were able to escape from the passenger and pilot's compartments.

The plane crashed between 9:30 and 10 o'clock last night but removal of the bodies was not undertaken until daylight because of the remoteness of the scene of the accident and the hilly terrain.

Lt. Fellows, in spite of his burns, set out in search of help on foot and did not find it until he had walked several miles. Then, with the assistance of others, he

DRIVING BAN MAY END SOON

Forecast For East Based On Ickes' Optimistic Statement On Fuel

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, July 29—Petroleum Administrator Ickes today forecast further gasoline and oil restrictions in the Mid-West and Southwest areas of the nation which will ease shortages in the 13 East coast states.

Ickes predicted that "equalization of gasoline rationing between the East coast and the Mid-Western and Southwestern states will take place within a few weeks."

WASHINGTON, July 29—Government petroleum officials today predicted that the East coast coast pleasure driving ban would soon be lifted, although President Roosevelt emphasized the great importance American gasoline shipments are playing in the global war.

This forecast was based on Petroleum Administrator Ickes' optimistic statement promising "a somewhat larger supply of gasoline for civilian use in the East."

The final say in the matter rests with War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes who is making an investigation of the petroleum situation. But the Byrnes probe, expected to be completed within "a week or two," obviously is being based on statistics of oil production and transportation supplied by Ickes' Petroleum Administration and the Interior Department Bureau of Mines.

Thus, Washington officials reason, if the facts warrant an optimistic outlook for Ickes, they must likewise make for an optimistic view by Byrnes in his report.

DELIVERANCE NEAR, FRENCH PEOPLE TOLD

ALGIERS, July 29 — The people of France today were given renewed assurance by the French Committee for National Liberation that the day of deliverance from Nazi bondage is near.

"The dictator forces which flung the world into war are beginning to crumble before the forces of liberty," said an Algiers radio broadcast to France, sponsored by the committee. "Keep up your courage. The day is coming when all may rise en masse and join the forces of liberation."

FDR WARNS OF BIG TASK AHEAD IN WINNING WAR

SOLDIER AID PROMISED

President Insists Benito And Henchmen Must Be Punished

WASHINGTON, July 29 — All the people of the United Nations today had assurances from President Roosevelt that the Allied forces are preparing to move on to the bigger task of crushing Germany and Japan, now that Italy has been virtually knocked out of the war.

In one of his most important fire-side radio reports to the nation, the President last night warned that defeating Hitler and Tojo on their home grounds will be no "easy matter"; emphasized this government's determination to insist on the unconditional surrender of Italy, and announced a social security demobilization plan for the men and women of the armed services.

In an address that covered a wide range of subjects on both the home and fighting fronts, President Roosevelt also announced the end of coffee rationing as of today; promised greatly increased allowances of sugar within a short time, but called on the American public to make greater sacrifices in the future to win the war.

Slips Tax Issue

There was one major issue the President did not mention — the subject of taxes. He was silent on the treasury's recent statement that taxes will have to be heavily increased next year to help pay the cost of the war.

He disclosed officially that the American government intends to insist that Benito Mussolini and his Fascist henchmen be punished for "their crimes against humanity"; said that the war against Italy will go on "until the Italian people realize the futility of continuing to fight," but held out the promise of a helping hand to them as soon as they capitulate.

In connection with the Pacific conflict, the President announced that the Allies now have superiority in the air over Burma. He also predicted that the Japanese will be unable to support for long their outposts in Burma, Siam, the Straits Settlements, the Dutch East Indies, New Guinea and the Solomon Islands.

Far From Goal

However, he warned at the same time that "we are still far from our main objectives in the war against Japan." He said the Allied forces in the Pacific are "pushing forward to occupation of positions which in time will enable us to attack the Japanese islands themselves from the North, South, East and West."

HUNT CONTINUES FOR DOUGHBOY LOST IN DESERT

CAMP YOUNG, Cal., July 29 — Army troops searched the desolate southern California-Arizona desert today for a missing soldier. Three other soldiers perished of thirst over the week end.

The victims were members of a platoon which became isolated from other units during maneuvers. Running out of water, their plight was aggravated by temperatures which ranged to 130 degrees, highest ever recorded in the area.

Thirty-four other soldiers were rescued, most of them suffering from exhaustion, and were sent to Yuma, Ariz., to recuperate, the army said.

ROME RAID PUT END TO IL DUCE

Travelers Say Sentiment Against Fascism Rose After Great Assault

SOMEWHERE ON THE ITALIAN-SWISS FRONTIER, July 29 — More than any other single factor, the American bombing raid on Rome brought about an irresistible tide of anti-Fascist sentiment in Italy and was the immediate cause of Benito Mussolini's downfall, travelers from the strife-torn kingdom reported today.

Effect of the bombing was "tremendous" and had a decisive influence on the mood of the people, these sources said, adding that at least 700 persons were killed in the attack and tremendous damage wrought.

Italian war-wearyness was said to have hit an all-time low with the Allied invasion of Sicily, but no untoward demonstrations occurred until the American planes came over Rome on July 19. The attack was cited as the first time

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Klerman

Well, old Harold Ickes explained a lot of things about bureaucracy the other day, but he didn't explain Ickes.

Shoes are rationed. You can get only three pairs a year and you can wear them out quickly and go barefoot or conserve them. That's up to you. Old Harold has nothing to do with shoes.

Food is rationed. You can get only so many points of food per month and no more. You can eat up your month's supply at once and go hungry or conserve. That's up to you. Old Harold has nothing to do with food.

Gasoline is rationed and an "A" card holder can get only a gallon and a half a week in the East. He can do practically nothing with it. That's up to old Harold, the Harold who has everything to do with gas.

And whether old Harold knows it or not he is turning a lot of people into rule-smashers.

Just as prohibition collapsed of its own stupid weight, so is the "pleasure" driving ban collapsing of its own stupid weight. "Pleasure" driving? On a gallon and a half of gas a week?

Thought for the day: Get hep Harold, . get hep!

DUTCH HARBOR SAVED FROM JAPS BY ENGINEERS

LOS ANGELES, July 29—How American Army engineers saved Dutch Harbor, Alaska, from the Japanese was revealed for the first time today by Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, chief of U. S. Army engineers.

The story of how the engineers, working under almost incredible hardships, won the thrilling race for the key Alaskan base was described at the opening session of the national convention of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

"Advancing cautiously and unseen under a protective cover of clouds and fog, a Japanese task force moved in slightly more than a year ago to attack the Aleutians," Gen. Reybold related.

"Warships, aircraft carriers and transports headed for Dutch Harbor. When they were about 60 miles away the carriers emerged from the fog bank and discharged their loads of fighter and bomber planes.

"At most, only a token opposition of anti-aircraft guns and a few flying boats was expected. But the Nipponese received the surprise of their lives.

"Our P-40 fighters and B-26 bombers arose in huge numbers from a field on Unimak Island, 60 miles west of Dutch Harbor. They swarmed toward the Jap fleet and, to avoid strafing and bombing, the warships and carriers ducked back into the fog," the general said.

"Army engineers had wrestled ceaselessly for months against the rock and tundra and foul weather of the Aleutians to build that airfield. It was completed only a few short days before the attack.

"They carved that landing field out of rock terrain that men of lesser courage and ability would have overlooked in airfield reconnaissance," he concluded.

"Consequently our Warhawks and Marauders were on hand to save Dutch Harbor."

WRECKED AXIS TANKS SLATED FOR MORE WAR

NEW YORK, July 29—Thousands of tons of scrap metal contributed by the Axis to America's war production machine were unloaded from freighters and Liberty ships today.

Brought to an undisclosed eastern port from North Africa by ten Liberty ships and freighters the haul included wrecked Axis tanks, trucks and planes, with a considerable number of German air transport engines. Each shipload of about 550 tons included Allied equipment as well as Axis.

As part of the army waste elimination program thousands of shoes worn by U. S. troops also have been returned for rebuilding. They will then be re-issued for rough training wear.

NAZIS ADMIT FASCISM DEATH

Berlin Tells Of Stormy Scenes As Duce Quits, But Says Rome Now Quiet

STOCKHOLM, July 29 — An official spokesman for the German foreign office was quoted today in a dispatch from Berlin as declaring that Italian Fascism has been "played out."

The correspondent of the newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported from the German capital that the end of collaboration between Hitler and Mussolini means a great loss to the Reich.

Evidence that Fascism has fallen in Italy was seen in Berlin when Italian journalists showed up at a news conference minus their Fascist insignia.

Berlin quarters admitted that stormy events took place throughout Italy early Sunday night and Monday but asserted that all is now quiet in Rome.

The military government of Italy was said to be maintaining a firm hand and it was reported that every important public square was guarded by soldiers and police armed with guns and in some instances having tanks.

Berlin admittedly was without any more knowledge of the whereabouts of Mussolini than the rest of the world following his overthrow.

LONDON PAPERS PLAY UP SPEECH BY ROOSEVELT

LONDON, July 29—Quotes from President Roosevelt's radio speech were splashed across the front pages of London newspapers today.

"Duce Will Not Escape Us—FDR" was the headline appearing in the Daily Express, coupled with the sub-head: "Mussolini and His Gang Will Be Punished."

"Italy has been promised freedom and self-reconstruction," the Express commented editorially. "The people of Italy have a choice fairly and squarely put before them by Roosevelt . . . if the Italian government does not seize its opportunity . . . northern Italy will become a German fighting base and all Italy will bear the same mark of German passage as Western Russia."

Eisenhower Advises Rome Peace Will Come When Germans Leave

LONDON, July 29—The possibility that the Italians already are seeking to comply with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's bid to oust German forces of aggression from Italian soil in return for immediate peace was seen today in reports that vigorous steps have been taken to prevent further entry of Nazi troops through the Brenner pass.

This belief grew in London despite protestations of the Rome radio that Italy will stay in the war with Germany against the Allies.

An Italian military spokesman, in a broadcast from Rome recorded by Reuters, appealed to the Italian armed forces to rally around King Victor Emmanuel.

"The war will be long and hard but we will fight on," the spokesman declared.

The majority of Italians, said an Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Zurich, are convinced that Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio already has entered negotiations seeking an armistice. It was said that a new "liberty movement" in Italy constantly is increasing in strength and already surpasses Badoglio's power.

The Nazis continued to foster the contention that Italy would remain in the Axis fold. Reuters reported a dispatch by the official German news agency, DNE, asserting that when Italy's new foreign minister, Raffaele Guariglia, stopped off in Sofia yesterday en route to Rome from Turkey he declared that "Italy will fight not against Fascism but for victory over the common enemy."

A dispatch from the Italian frontier quoted the newspaper Gazzetta del Popolo of Turin as stating that although Italy could not tolerate occupation if the populace demanded peace the nation would have to accept all conditions imposed.

Swiss reports said that "open revolt" has broken out in Milan, Turin and Genoa. Crowds in the three cities are said to be demonstrating constantly for peace, and deaths in rioting are reported running into hundreds, according to a dispatch to the London Evening News. Hundreds of Republican labor leaders were reported arrested throughout Italy.

Other Swiss reports said that Milan was in the grip of a general strike.

SOUTH AFRICANS SUPPORT WAR AIM OF ALLIES

CAPETOWN, July 29 — An overwhelming majority of South Africans support the war policy of Premier Jan Christiaan Smuts, according to latest returns today in the national elections.

Anti-war candidates of the Nationalist party won only 10 seats so far, against 61 for the premier's United party.

Returns up to a late hour also gave the Dominion party seven seats, the Labor party two and the Independents one.

Seventy-seven local pro-war candidates have been returned to office thus far.

WAR WORKERS REMOVE DUCE FROM POSTERS

LONDON, N. J., July 29—Only the faces of Hitler and Hirohito leered today from the war posters scattered throughout the eastern aircraft plant of General Motors.

John J. Cardomone, recently honorably discharged from the U. S. Navy after being torpedoed in the North Atlantic, made the rounds of the big plane factory armed with a bucket of red paint and a brush, and carefully blotted out the face of Mussolini.

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, July 29—Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson has arrived in North Africa to inspect American troops in the Mediterranean war theatre.

Stimson went directly to North Africa following an extensive visit in the British Isles, where he conferred with high British political and military officials.

By International News Service
The war-weary Italian people today were told by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean, that they would be granted an honorable peace immediately on cessation of assistance to German forces now on Italian soil.

"You can have peace immediately and peace under honorable conditions which our governments have already offered you," Gen. Eisenhower declared in a message broadcast to Italy.

"We are coming to you as liberators. Your part is to cease immediately any assistance to the German military forces in your country."

Possibility that the Italians were trying to comply with the Eisenhower offer was seen in reports that vigorous steps were taken to prevent further entry of Nazi troops into Italy through the Brenner Pass.

However, an Italian spokesman, in a Rome radio broadcast reported by Reuters, British news agency, appealed to the Italian armed forces to rally around King Victor Emmanuel and added: "The war will be long and hard, but we will fight on."

Gen. Eisenhower's broadcast followed a flood of unconfirmed reports telling of new disorders throughout Italy, and declaring that a "liberty movement" already had gained strength exceeding that of Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio. One of the rumors from the continent said most Italians were convinced Badoglio already had started negotiating for an armistice.

dress. In some Republican congressional quarters it was viewed as a bid for the political support of the returning soldiers when the war is over.

The proposed plan includes mustering out pay to every honorably discharged member of the armed forces and merchant marine; special unemployment insurance; subsidized educational facilities; improved and liberalized medical care for disability cases; and "sufficient" pensions.

The President's statement that "ahead of us are much bigger fights" was interpreted in Washington as an appeal to the American people to gird themselves for the more decisive battles of the Second World War—battles that will take a far heavier toll in casualties than anything that has happened thus far.

Hard Tasks Ahead

President Roosevelt's remark that the defeat of Hitler and Tojo, and their gangs, will be no easy matter was seen as an effort to curb quickly the spread of any complacent belief in this country that the war is nearly over because of the swiftness with which Fascism appears to have collapsed in Italy when the Allied armies struck at the "soft under-belly" of Europe.

High military and diplomatic sources in Washington were in unanimous agreement with the President's warning that defeating Hitler and Tojo "on their own home grounds" will require "a far greater concentration of our national energy and our ingenuity and our skill."

Authoritative sources said it was because of the conviction that hard days still lie ahead that the President emphasized any complacency or indifference on the part of the home front "may sacrifice the lives of American soldiers and contribute to the loss of an important battle."

Meanwhile, Italy had blunt notice from the President that there will be no deal or compromise with the new royalist regime of King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal Pietro Badoglio. The President made it unmistakably clear that unconditional surrender represents the only terms on which Italy can get peace with the United Nations.

A dispatch to the Evening Standard said that German troops were pouring through the Brenner pass and moving southward after earlier reports said Badoglio had dispatched five divisions, supported by artillery, to stem the movement.

A Berne dispatch to Reuter said that a German foreign office spokesman admitted that the Badoglio government might give way to a new regime before the end of the week. Crown Prince Umberto was mentioned as the rallying point for a new regime. Official Italian circles, according to the Germans, state Badoglio hopes to fight a slowing action against the Allies with large material reserves given by the Germans.

Official London quarters had no knowledge of a report that German and Italian troops already had clashed in northern Italy.

The reported movement of Italian troops to the north came as advice from the continent told of continued popular demonstrations for peace in the larger cities of Italy and additional anti-Fascist riots. The situation at Milan, birthplace of Fascism, was said to border on revolution.

Badoglio was reported to have ordered his troops to the north to stop the entry of German troops after informing Hitler that no more Germans would be allowed in because of refusal of the Nazi high command to defend all of Italy.

in the war that a sudden large-scale bombing has so influenced public morale as to bring about an important political change.

According to the refugees reaching this border point and bursting with real or fancied versions of the situation that developed, latent opposition flared into the open immediately after the bombing.

"The population no longer held back but openly expressed its anti-Fascist feeling," one traveler said. "Fascists who appeared in uniform were threatened with violence and called murderers and rogues."

"When King Victor Emmanuel visited the bombed areas, he was greeted with shouts like 'has not enough innocent blood been spilled?' This public reaction must have strengthened the king in his decision to send Mussolini away."

The Fascist dictator "did not dare" to make a public appearance and inspect the bomb damage after his alleged meeting with Adolf Hitler at Verona, it was said, until after a fake air raid alarm had been sounded to clear the streets of civilians.

in Allied hands were the towns of Pollina, Castelbuono and Gangi.

The bulletin said fierce fighting continued at the center of the Axis arc of defenses, where Canadian forces inflicted heavy casualties on bitterly resisting foes.

The British Eighth Army continued to probe enemy defenses before the besieged eastern coast port of Catania. Reports to Allied headquarters indicated that the Germans were still pouring reinforcements into Sicily across the Messina bridgehead for a desperate battle with converging Allied forces.

On the Russian front, German forces north of Orel beat a hasty retreat, leaving many dead and large quantities of equipment on the battlefield, when the Soviets launched a surprise attack on the Nazi flank in the Bolkhov area.

Nazis Add Strength

In a desperate attempt to stem the new Russian gains north of the beleaguered German base, the Nazis rushed reinforcements to the front in motor cars and immediately threw them into the fight.

Another important Russian victory on the Orel front was the seizure of Stanovoi Kolodez, second station from Orel on the Orel-Kursk railroad, which links the Nazi base with battlefronts to the south.

Latest reports place the Russians within 10 miles of Orel on three of four railroads that enter the city.

In the Pacific war theatre, Allied planes lashed out at Japanese shipping routes. Heavy bombers left a Jap destroyer and cargo ship burning fiercely off Cape Gloucester, New Britain, and a second cargo vessel was hit by bombs during the course of a heavy raid on the enemy base at Manokwari, in Dutch New Guinea.

A furious sky battle developed over New Britain when nine Allied fighters, escorted Allied bombers, shot down six of 15 attacking Zeros while the bombers blasted an enemy base, destroying seven barges.

however, that the lifting of the East coast pleasure driving ban, or the extent to which it can be eased, will depend on the amount of additional gasoline to be allotted for civilian consumption on the Atlantic seaboard and other areas east of the Rocky mountains.

The brightening gasoline prospects for the East result mainly from completion of the 24-inch pipeline from Texas to the Philadelphia-New York consumer area, but up to two weeks ago, Ickes repeatedly cautioned civilians against expecting liberalization of the pleasure driving ban.

All persons in Rome, according to the Dagens Nyheter, were surprised at the sudden turn of events and asked in amazement how it was so easy that Mussolini could have been overthrown in the fiery meeting of the Fascist grand council last Saturday. They know now, however, that it is dangerous for anyone to wear the once-familiar black shirt and the Fascist party sign. Millions who once wore the insignia have abandoned it. No policeman or soldier any longer gives the Fascist salute.

Coffee Rationing At End; Promise Made Of Larger Sugar Supply

Coffee rationing was ended throughout the nation Thursday and housewives of Circleville and Pickaway county were given an encouraging report by a War Food Administration spokesman concerning what they may find in the way of food during August at the corner grocery store.

President Roosevelt declared Wednesday night that coffee rationing is ending immediately and that the American public will probably get a greatly increased allowance of sugar in a short time.

ministration had done more to improve living conditions for the working man than his own.

"I'm not trying to censure your administration," countered Murray, "but the record is pretty clear in this case. The War Labor Board is doing all in its power to hold down labor, but these other fellows, like Byrnes (James Byrnes, chief of the Office of War Mobilization) and Brown (Prentiss Brown, head of the OPA) aren't doing anything about controlling the prices the working man has to pay.

"I realize that you've got your hands full running this war, but the time has come to speak out about some of those around you who are supposed to be handling the domestic situation. No one seems to be concerned about increases in the price of things the working man has to buy. The OPA has been letting prices run wild, but every time labor asks for an adjusted increase in wages, there's a roar of protest."

The CIO leader launched into a scorching tirade against Byrnes for "vetoing legitimate requests by labor" for pay increases, intimating that the OWM chief was looking after the interests of management in industrial wage disputes.

"I resent your remarks about Jimmy Byrnes," the President shot back angrily. He added that Byrnes wasn't grinding any axes for anyone and that he was doing a patriotic job to curb inflation to the best of his ability.

The fireworks ended at this point, but Roosevelt and Murray didn't fall over each other saying good-bye when the conference adjourned.

"BE PREPARED"

Republican boosters of Tom Dewey say he already has chosen the man who will manage his Presidential campaign if things look propitious six months hence. He is Edwin F. Jaekle, Republican state chairman of New York. Jaekle recently sold his home in Buffalo preparatory to throwing himself full tilt into the drive to sell Dewey as the 1944 nominee.

A nationwide tour to line up convention delegates is being planned, but meantime Jaekle has been busy with some minor chores. Recently he was host at a cocktail party in Washington for various GOP Congressmen, especially the Ohio delegation, probably aimed at cutting the ground from Ohio's colorless Presidential hopeful, Gov. John W. Bricker.

AN EMPIRE VANISHES
THE collapse of Italy has been so rapid, since the Allied assault began, that it is even yet hard to believe. The most direct cause of Italian downfall was doubtless the powerful British-American assault on Sicily and Rome, with all the implications that went with those blows. But Italy was already a rotten branch of the Nazi war scheme, and its rotten leader was ready for his exit.

So ends the brief dream of a modern Italian empire, reviving the glory of ancient Rome. The Italian people will settle down now, poorer than ever, with less room for expansion and less prestige, to recoup their human and material losses as best they may.

Britain and America will probably be generous enough to help them, if the new Italian regime, after unconditional surrender, gives sincere pledges of cooperation with the civilized powers from now on. It is generally felt in America that the evil forces at work in Italy came from Mussolini and Hitler, although many Italians were unduly eager to take advantage of such criminal partnership. If Italy will go straight hereafter, she may be respected and prosperous a generation from now.

THE LOOSE MONEY
THE government continues to worry about the inflation danger, and so do millions of citizens. But more people are worrying about it than are doing anything about it. The usual attitude seems to be that it's something like fate, and can't be helped or prevented.

It is indicated at Washington that the President will go to the people soon with "blueprints" of this situation, pointing out that something can and must be done about it. The sooner, the better.

There are said to be tens of billions of loose dollars sloshing around this country, in the form of cash, credit, and bank deposits, looking for things to buy. And at a time when there are fewer and fewer things produced, it is natural to try to buy them by offering more money for them. That means wasteful spending by those who have it, and makes life harder for those who haven't.

One simple remedy for this wasteful foolishness doesn't seem yet to have occurred to millions of people. It is the process of putting loose money into war bonds. That takes it out of circulation, eases the spending pressure and keeps down prices, and at the same time creates savings for future hard times.

When it's over all Americans will want to go to Europe and all Europeans will want to come to America. There'll be enough shipping for it, too.

We seem now to be getting into a period of government by columnists.

Chiang Kai-shek Speaks for Critics of Police Plan Believe International Police Force Plan Idea Fine but Just Unworkable

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—CHIANG KAI-SHEK, China's generalissimo, is the latest booster for an international police force to keep world peace after the present war is over.

Inasmuch as Mme. Chiang is just home after her extensive Occidental tour, plenty of guesses are made that she inspired the Chungking executive's very recent appeal to the United Nations' various leaderships for an advance pledge of devotion to such a program and to co-operation in its favor beginning right now.

It is a plan that has been quite frequently suggested by European statesmen heretofore and Chiang's advocacy of it may prove to have given it quite a boom, as it circulates in the democratic capitals' miscellaneous midlands.

Nevertheless, the plan's opponents are not unheard from, either.

Its critics find fault with the scheme, not on the ground that it would not be a blessing theoretically, but on the basis of the contention that it could not possibly be made to work in practice for more than a scant generation, if that long. Certainly it is not endorsed by any of the Axis countries. They want conquest of the democracies. If liked, they may stay licked for awhile, but the proposed police force's mission will be to police THEM, rather than to have them as participants in the policing of the whole bunch.

The supposition is that they are criminals—to BE policed. Criminals do not STAY policed any longer than they can help it. The Axis folk today have four leaderships—Fuehrer Hitler's, Duce Mussolini's, the Jap military class' leadership and a rather flabby leadership in Spain, by Caudillo Franco.

Adolf doubtless can be personally exterminated, but will that ex-

By DREW PEARSON

UNSUNG HEROES
WASHINGTON — Unsung U. S. heroes who contributed heavily to Mussolini's downfall were Italian-American boys smuggled into Sicily several weeks before U. S. troops landed.

How they got ashore must remain a military secret. But the fact that they got there is now recognized as a part of military operations, just as the advance landing of Lt. Gen. Mark Clark in North Africa, carrying bags of U. S. gold.

These Italian-Americans were especially trained in the dangerous, delicate job of winning over military garrisons in advance of a landing force. In Sicily they had the advantage of speaking the language and being able to visit the homes of their relatives, few of whom loved Mussolini. From there they were able to work around to various military leaders.

It has long been known that Italian military leaders were of two types. One is the professional soldier like Field Marshal Badoglio, who was in the army before Mussolini's time and has no love for the Fascists. Also he has no love for the Nazis, and so was not too difficult to win over to the Allied side.

Other type of Italian military leaders is the Fascist Blackshirt, who rose through favors from Il Duce, but who usually is susceptible to coin of the realm. Presumably U. S. advance scouts were supplied with what Gen. Clark took with him in advance into North Africa.

At any rate, expert advance work by patriotic Italian-Americans, plus the popularity of the United States in Sicily, contributed to one of the most bloodless landings expeditions in history.

Also the psychological shock of the headlong U. S. rush through Sicily was what toppled Mussolini off his thorny throne.

After the French commander had been led through the labyrinth of Pentagon corridors to general staff headquarters, and later out into the sunlight, he was asked what he thought of the place.

"Well," remarked Gen. Giraud, "I've escaped from two German prisons, but I could never get out of this building."

FDR-MURRAY FIREWORKS
Some hot words were exchanged between the President and CIO leader Phil Murray when Murray and other members of the AFL-CIO combined war council called at the White House to discuss wage and price controls.

Murray bluntly charged the President with going back on his promise to roll back prices to September 15, 1942.

"You haven't done what you said you were going to do, Mr. President," the CIO chief declared. "Labor is getting tired of being a football."

Obviously nettled by the charge that he hadn't kept his word, the President pressed his lips together, then reminded Murray in frigid tones that if he could get any better cooperation from Congress on price subsidies and other issues than he (Roosevelt) had received, Murray was welcome to try.

Furthermore, he added, acidly, no adgists now yields to the sulfa drugs with almost 100 per cent good results. A great deal of our trouble with pneumonia was due to epidemics spreading from single cases; it was not carelessness, but simply that there was nothing effective to be done about it. Now the single cases are cleared up in short order, and there have been few, if any, serious epidemics in the camps.

Tropical diseases have become an experience that the medical corps of my day did not have to meet to any extent. The few cases we saw were turned over to the regular medical corps officers who had been trained at the Army school of tropical medicine.

Today certain faculty members of all medical schools have been sent to take courses in tropical medicine and have returned to give courses to the prospective medical officers, now medical students. Malaria is the worst problem; even though quinine and atabrine can halt most of the immediate symptoms, it is still a tough customer and digs into the body to come to the surface at unexpected moments.

Leave My Heart Alone

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

KAREN BEILL, wealthy and lovely, has been the sweetheart of another member of her rich Florida set. PAUL WYATT, since childhood. However, she surprisingly encounters a young stranger, obviously not of her social standing, and learns that he is MARTIN HALIDAY.

YESTERDAY: Paul gives Karen her engagement ring.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

IT DID NOT occur to Karen, when Paul gave her her gorgeous engagement ring, that she really should have had some other thought besides the one that the next time she saw Martin Haliday she would be wearing it, which would make him—and her—feel safe. It was a silly thought, anyway. They were safe. Nothing like that kiss ever would happen again. Marty had given his word it would not. And now Karen was wise enough to be wary of moons and such. From now on she would see Marty only in the bright light of day, when there were other people about, as when they happened to meet on the beach, or when he came over to play with Buffy, as he had promised, or any accidental contact that that temptress Fate managed to contrive.

She was proud of her ring, after she got used to its being so blindingly beautiful and so outstandingly conspicuous. She was very conscious of it on that finger of her left hand because it was so large and perfect a stone, set in its unique circlet of sapphires, and with a carved platinum mounting that made it seem heavier than it actually was. It was a sort of weight on her finger at that, probably because it was just a bit tight and because Karen did not wear rings or any jewelry except on very special dress-up occasions.

She wondered why Paul had gotten quite such a gorgeous symbol of their betrothal. He usually preferred less "flashy" things, having a most conventional taste in such matters. Besides, although Paul would be a very rich man some day, he was not extravagant, limiting his present-day standards to fit the salary he drew as vice president of his father's bank and his own personal holdings and investments. This ring represented a fabulous amount, almost a small fortune, for aside from the actual cost of the stones and setting, it had been purchased from an exclusive dealer who charged outrageous prices for original pieces.

Even Karen's closest friends were impressed when they saw her ring for the first time. They all said that Paul certainly had outdone himself. They all exclaimed and admired and sighed over it, with possibly one exception. It was an exception that stood out in Karen's mind, although she tried to brush it aside as of no importance. It happened at once of the numerous parties that were being given for her, now that her engagement had been formally announced. It was a bridge and bridal shower like several others preceding it. But it was the first big affair, given at one of the Beach clubs, that included more guests, both younger and older, than the smaller group that composed Karen's most intimate friends.

As usual, Karen was loaded down with packages of all sizes, taken from wrappings of white tissue and white ribbons, from a shower consisting of linens and underthings and termed "miscellaneous." There had been stocking showers and kitchen showers and every conceivable kind. All left her with armfuls of presents and a pleased, yet embarrassed, feeling of being something of a highway robber with so much loot, as she laughingly and frankly called it.

It was while she was repacking this particular plunder, putting dainty garments back into their boxes, tying up and stacking others, that Eva Parks came up to her. She said, "May I see. . . I guess I'm the only one who hasn't . . . close at hand, I mean."

She spoke in such an abrupt, broken manner that Karen glanced up, startled. Her voice had sounded tight and strange; her face had a drawn look, too, if one could say that about Eva's pretty, childish face, which reminded one of a French doll—it was so round, so pink and white, with china-blue eyes, dimples in the right places, even the mop of curling ringlets, of a reddish hue.

"Of course you may see," Karen began untying the top package. She had hoped not to have to go all through that ordeal of showing each gift separately again, but she would try to be good-naturedly obliging. That was part of the price of all this fuss that secretly she had dreaded and which she was already finding more trying than she had imagined.

"I don't mean those," Eva's tone still was short, not curt or rude, but just as if it were forced from her against her will. "You know I don't mean the shower presents. I don't care . . . not about them. They're like all the others. At first I thought I didn't care. I'd rather not . . . see it, too. But I want to . . . in one way . . . I might as well . . . everyone talking about it . . ."

Karen was more puzzled than ever. Why didn't Eva say what she wanted to see without all this beating about? Of course all adolescent youngsters found some difficulty at times in expressing themselves. And Eva, being barely 17, was adolescent. Eva would be adolescent when she was 70. "I don't quite understand," Karen began, smiling up at the younger girl encouragingly. "YOU wouldn't?" Eva's interruption was so very abrupt, so rude in its stark note of condemnation that it was almost like a slap in the face. Her blue eyes actually seemed to give off sparks, sparks of hatred.

Of course that was absurd; Karen dismissed this last immediately. There was no reason why Eva Parks should hate or even dislike Karen. She might resent her, since Karen was older, she might be envious, she might . . .

"You'd NEVER understand," the younger girl went on in a hot little rush of words. "You have everything your own way . . . you always have . . . you take whatever you want without any thought of anyone ever. . . . But it's not that. . . . not now. . . . She paused to bite her pretty soft lips between small, even white teeth, to gain some measure of control that diminished the sparks in her eyes into a smoldering flame. "It's your ring . . . that's what I want to see."

"Why, of course," Karen remained bewildered. Probably something had upset the youngster, something having nothing whatever to do with Karen. She dropped her packages, held out her hand. The big stone caught fire and blazed challengingly, triumphantly. Eva stared at it, seemingly speechless, now that her outburst was over. She did not offer to touch the ring or Karen's hand, but her eyes held fascination as if she could not look away from it.

Then she said, breaking the silence, making that one exception that Karen was to ponder over afterwards, "I don't like it. I wouldn't want it." There was almost something like triumph in her tone, something like a challenge.

"You . . ." It was Karen who floundered for words now. For this was almost another slap. It was so much more than flat rudeness. It was so ungracious, so bitter. But that, too, was absurd, so that now she could manage a little laugh, diamas this, too. "You mean you think it's a bit on the ornate side? I do, too, to be perfectly honest, although, of course, I'd never say that to anyone else except you, Eva. It's almost too gorgeous, which was what I told Paul. No girl, not any one person, quite has a right to wear anything so dazzling."

She hoped that what she had said would make whatever was wrong all right. At least it would smooth over that open breach of rudeness. It would show the other girl it had not rankled, although in spite of such denial, in a way it did.

But Eva did not say anything more. Not about the ring. She seemed to wrench her eyes away from it with an effort. She looked directly at Karen for a brief second, her eyes like agates, they were so devoid of any expression, so cold. She said in a cold, hard little voice, too, "Thanks. So THAT was what you told Paul. Maybe you don't know what that means, either."

With that cryptic and amazingly baffling speech, she whirled on her high-heeled sandals and, with a flourish of wide, gaily flowered skirts, was gone.

"Well," Karen drew a rather long breath. She began gathering up her presents once more, slowly, thoughtfully. Of course she had not told Paul that, not in exactly that way, with that meaning. She had been very careful to say nothing that would hurt his feelings or make him entertain the slightest suspicion that she was not perfectly satisfied and thrilled with the ring he had given her.

Would Eva tell him? What had been behind this little episode, the younger girl's behavior, her rude remarks, that look of hatred?

ROOT OF ALL EVIL

Money is the root of all evil in "The Case of the Deadly Million," Nero Wolfe adventure to be heard Monday at 8:30 p. m. over the Blue Network. The adventure is probably the most memorable among Detective Wolfe's mysteries. In this case, Nero misses out on his fee—a rare and almost unheard-of mishap with Wolfe.

the dictator was the target of more than twenty attempts on his life during his years of power.

Duane Thompson, if she could ever be lured away from radio, should certainly be the answer to the telephone company's prayer, considering the current shortage of operators. six years, altogether, she was the hello-girl on "Hedda Hopper's Hollywood" and on "Hollywood Hotel."

Quite a few curious listeners wrote in following the premiere program of "Bob Crosby and Company" to ask about "Kate," whom Bob mentioned in his closing speech. Said the maestro: "I hope you'll be with us next week—because if you don't, I'll be playing just for Kate." Kate is Bob Crosby's mother.

Half of Wells on Farms Polluted

Warning that more than 50 percent of all farm wells that have been tested by his department this summer have contained contaminated or polluted water, Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Pickaway county health commissioner, is urging rural residents who use water from dug wells to take advantage of the county health office's well examination service in order to play safe.

"Numerous private wells have been examined so far this summer," the health commissioner told the county board of health at its meeting Wednesday afternoon, "and much of the water has been tested by the state laboratory. More than 50 percent of all farm wells tested have contained contaminated or polluted water."

"The water supply on the farms that comes from dug wells is, as a general rule, bad," the commissioner pointed out. "This bad quality of water is caused in nearly every case by surface water entering the well."

Dr. Blackburn pointed to poor construction of well walls and well coverings as responsible for this condition. "In many cases a drain tile in close proximity to the well is the source of contamination," he declared.

The health officer went on to explain that many private wells have been neglected and the upper wall has crumbled or the well covering has rotted, permitting dirt of all kinds to enter the water.

The health office has cleaned many wells and repaired and chlorinated others and most of these wells are producing pure water, Dr. Blackburn told the health board. "However," he informed his board, "too many persons are careless about their family water supply. Many forms of intestinal disorders, including typhoid, are caused by contaminated water."

Attention of the public was called Thursday by the health commissioner to a free service offered by his office for water supply checking and sewage disposal. All persons who wish service along these lines are asked to contact Dr. Blackburn. Persons wishing their farm water supplies analyzed should obtain a water container from the health office.

"Much intestinal sickness can be prevented if the water supply is kept pure," Dr. Blackburn pointed out.

The health board was informed that the county is again free of quarantines, the last cases of scarlet fever being taken down this week.

Eight tonsil operations have been performed at Berger hospital under auspices of the county health office, and arrangements are being made for several more. Four tuberculosis contacts were x-rayed and examined this month. Two new cases entered tuberculosis institutions for treatment, and two were dismissed from treatment. Several dog and cat heads were taken to the state laboratory for examination for rabies, all proving negative.

Mrs. Effie Hill, county health nurse, reported to the county board concerning her work during July her report including work in communicable disease cases, tuberculosis control, maternity service, infant and preschool hygiene, school hygiene, morbidity service and personal conferences.

work shoes and 25 percent in men's safety shoes.
